Cassiopeia - the queen in the sky

GARY BOYLE
Backyard Astronomer

As the sun sets in the west, the sky slowly turns pastel shades from light to dark blue. This is my favourite time of evening as the brighter stars and planets begin to reveal themselves. Over the next twenty minutes, more tiny dots emerge like celestial popcorn. About an hour after sunset, the sky is full of stars as viewed from the countryside on a moonless night.

Warm September nights still allow us to gaze at our lovely Milky Way. Stretching from the heaviest concentration of stars in the south, which is the galactic centre, all the way to the northeast and this is where we see the iconic "W" symbolizing Cassiopeia the Queen. This is a circumpolar constellation meaning it never sets as seen from Canadian soil. Although these five stars might look the same, they range in distance from 55 to 613 light-years away.

In Greek mythology, King Cephus and Queen Cassiopeia ruled the land. She often boasted that she was the most beautiful of all. Legend states that the sea god Poseidon was not pleased with Cassiopeia's statement of her vanity and forced the King and Queen to sacrifice their daughter, Andromeda, to the sea monster Cetus. However, our hero Perseus, who was returning from slaying the Medusa, rescues Andromeda in the nick of time as they ride off on his winged horse, Pegasus. This story depicting six constellations is sometimes referred to as the "Royal Family of Constellations".

To date, 26 exoplanets are orbiting 17 stars. One star catalogued HD 219134 located 21 light-years away has seven bodies circling it. The closest exoplanet takes a mere three days to orbit the star while the farthest takes 2,220 days. Aside from the individual stars, there is a lovely star cluster with catalogue number M52 located 500 light-years away. You will need binoculars to see this open cluster superimposed in front of the further Milky Way stars.

A beautiful object located in the constellation Perseus is called the Double Cluster and are two side-by-side star clusters located 7,300 and 7,700 light-years away. The constellation Perseus is located below the "W". On a clear moonless night, away from light sources, the Double Cluster is seen naked-eye meaning without using any optical aid. A few hundred young hot supergiant stars reside in the two clusters. And that smudge to Cassiopeia's right is the Andromeda Galaxy. At two and a quarter million light-years away it is the closest galaxy to us. The light you see left the Andromeda Galaxy when Homo Hibilus was walking the earth two and a quarter million years ago.

MIKE BAKER
County Life editor

Bob Stiles, front, and Greg Roe pictured paddling in Head Lake earlier in August as they completed their five lake canoeing adventure as part of the 2021 Haliburton Highlands Challenge. /GRACE OBORNE Staff.

"Just keep paddling," was the mantra adopted by seasonal Haliburton County resident Bob Stiles this summer as he and a friend completed a five lake canoeing adventure to help raise money for the Abbey Retreat Centre (ARC).

Himself a cancer survivor, Stiles had the opportunity to experience firsthand all that the Abbey has to offer during a four-day stay back in July 2019.

The facility helps to create healing spaces and a like-minded, understanding community for people living with cancer, and the family and friends who support them. Located just behind Abbey Gardens off of Hwy. 118, ARC offers a variety of in-person and online retreats and programs that, Stiles says, offer rest and renewal, companionship, meaningful discussions, and an introduction to evidence-informed practices that tend to the body, mind and soul while living with cancer.

"It's a wonderful, wonderful resource for people … who are at any stage of their cancer journey," Stiles said. "They're able to bring a caregiver, friend or a loved one with them and the experience is just so impactful. There's nutritious food provided by a professional cook, there are all sorts of programs – expressive arts sessions in the morning, and relaxation yoga in the evening. I remember, while I was there, we did a massive drumming circle, led by a creative drummer, which was really quite cathartic.

"Then, on top of all of that, there are sessions that allow for people to share their stories and experiences in a safe place. Generally, you meet as a group, and then cancer patients and their caregivers will talk, and it can really go in any direction. For me, it was a really profound experience," Stiles added.

The brainchild of John and Thea Patterson, ARC was designed solely for the purpose of helping individuals diagnosed with cancer through their individual healing journey. Over the years, the organization has grown, to the point that, today, it is able to call upon globally-recognized specialists from a variety of fields that can help people to improve their mental and physical health.

Haliburtin Highlands Challenge fundraiser to support ARC runs to Sept. 14

The in-person retreats, which have been on hold since February 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic, take place over the course of four days. Each retreat can accommodate up to 10 guests, who stay in cozy suites on-site.

And the truly special thing about ARC – its programming is offered free of charge.

"The Abbey, I think, recognizes the myriad of burdens that cancer really puts on people, not the least of which is financial," Stiles said. "So, the retreat is a gift to the participants."

The one consequence, or drawback to that, Stiles says is, at the end of the day, there's still a bill to pay.

Since its launch in Haliburton County five years ago, ARC has been almost exclusively donor funded. While the organization has been successful in applying for some government grants, the bulk of its annual budget is made up of money brought in by the local community.

Immediately following his stint at the Abbey a couple of years ago, Stiles got involved in the organization's fundraising endeavours. He helped to found the Haliburton Highlands Challenge – an initiative designed to encourage people to get active in any way that they can, and raise money while doing so.

This year's challenge runs until Sept. 14.

For his part, Stiles teamed up Greg Roe to canoe across five lakes in our community – Canning Lake, Head Lake, Grass Lake, Kashagawigamog Lake and Soyers Lake. They completed their journey on Aug. 10, thus far raising just over $5,500.

"When we first starting coming up to Haliburton 20 years ago, we had a place at Williams Landing on Kashagawigamog … I used to go out and paddle there every day before I got sick," Stiles said, reflecting upon his inspiration to canoe as part of the fundraiser.

Roe remembers meeting Stiles several years ago while they were both involved with CanoeFM. Given that history, and the pair's love for paddling out on the open water, canoeing for the event, as opposed to walking or running, seemed "a pretty good fit", Roe stated.

As of press time, the second-annual Haliburton Highlands Challenge has raised $33,952 against a $50,000 goal.

That money will go a long way, Stiles says. The cost to run a full four-day retreat for 10 guests is approximately $10,000, while the two-day online retreats ARC has been running since the onset of the pandemic come at a cost of $300. It is hoped that in-person retreats will be able to start up again before the end of the year.

Stiles hopes that will be the case. While he applauded ARC for pivoting and launching an online program to assist people while they have been closed over the past 18 months, he says there's nothing quite like the experience of attending a retreat in-person.

"There are many, many benefits, and those benefits are different for different people. For me, it was the connections I made," Stiles said. "I became really close with a young couple in their mid-30s. I formed a really close connection with the young woman. Unfortunately, she died four months later.

"That's just the sad reality. During my time there, there was a guy who was the exact same age as me, with the exact same story. He didn't last nine months after his stem cell transplant," Stiles added.

Another eye opener, he said, was seeing how the retreat impacted his wife.

"Her part of the journey was really moving. Throughout the whole ordeal, we tried to protect one another as best we could, and so I really had no idea of what she had gone through," Stiles said. "I think if I were to pick out one thing, it's that, by attending, you have the opportunity to be heard at a very deep level. You have a holistic team there working with you, your loved one there working with you. Everyone is pulling in the same direction."

Golf: A game for everyone

JANET TRULL
Special to County Life

HALIBURTON COUNTY is dotted with the kind of golf courses you find in the old country. Other countries may claim it, but Scotland is most widely credited with its invention. Highlanders the world over are a rough lot, embracing , harsh winters, cold lakes and impenetrable forests. So it's no wonder that the Scottish immigrants who settled here in the 19th century felt quite at home in these northern townships, and it was only a matter of time before they started carving golf courses out of the bush. Were there challenges? A few. Grass doesn't grow well on granite ridges. There were black flies and mosquitoes. And, yes. You need some mountain goat blood to walk our courses.

But, oh, the I learned the game at the Haliburton Highlands course on Kashagawigamog, coached by my father who'd been playing there since the 1940s. It wasn't an easy place to learn. But I loved the little caddy shack that sold candy. For energy. And the crooked old rain shelters tucked along the bush line in case of unexpected storms. Highlands are notorious for unexpected weather. But best of all was the view of the lake from the 9th tee. (It is the 8th tee now). The grand finale to every round.

Malcom Gladwell weighs in with his assertion that golf is "crack cocaine for rich white guys." Sure. There are some exclusive courses with exorbitant fees and opulent clubhouses, but that is not the golf we play in Haliburton or Minden or Carnarvon. In fact, golf is probably the most inclusive game around. What other sport can I participate in competitively with my ninety year old mother and my grandchildren? Hockey? Football? Skateboarding?

I am always happy to see young people taking an interest in golf. Last week, I heard about a new golf course being developed in the Highlands. The Gelert Golf Course, currently under construction, has a view of the Irondale River, a lovely pond with a fountain to rival the Bellagio in Las Vegas, and a makeshift pro shop. The developers are nine year old Reese Wood and her brother, seven year old Miller Wood. With the help of their grandfather and his Kubota, they created a 250 yard fairway out of the Donald wilderness. Their grandmother, a local golf legend herself, is proud of their accomplishments.

"They made score cards and got out the Monopoly money for green fees. The fees are high. Three hundred dollars a round. But the scenery rivals Pebble Beach," Mrs. Wood claims. She is teaching them the etiquette that makes golf a pleasure to play. The lessons learned require the kind of discipline that leads to success in all walks of life.

Repair your divots. In other words, if you make a mess, clean it up.

Never show your temper when you knock one into the pond. We all have challenges. Learn to accept them and carry on. A smooth sea does not a skilled sailor make. Ask Brooke Henderson. Ask Mackenzie Hughes.

Let faster golfers play through. Yes, kids … Some old people are better than you. It's humbling, I know. Don't hold them up.

Reese and Miller are learning the importance of practicing. Like the olden days, when driveways on every street echoed with the sounds of bouncing basketballs and pucks hitting garage doors, young golfers have to practice to improve. So take the kids to the driving range, or do as the Woods have done, and set up a golf course in your own backyard.

The best season for golf is almost upon us. Fall. The forests are about to explode in colour. The bugs and humidity are vanishing. Haliburton County's picturesque courses are waiting for beginners and pros, young and old. See you on the links.

Top 10 reasons why a dog is man's best friend

EVERYONE SAYS a dog is man's best friend. But have you ever wondered why? Here are the top 10 reasons why we get along so well.

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

1. What else would you call a person who provides food and housing for life?
2. No other animal wants the job.
3. They never even try to outfish you.
4. No dog would ever think about drinking all your beer.
5. Just to make cats jealous.
6. At least a dog will share the couch.
7. Your old best friend wouldn't retrieve.
8. A dog can keep secrets.
9. The worse you smell, the more interesting a dog finds you.
10. Admit it. You're both hard-wired to chase squirrels.

3 am

Most nights I plain awaken:
No dream, no thirst, no sound
'Good morning!' is mistaken:
There's only me around
The house and cat still slumber
Just crickets seem alive
Alarm clock changes number:
Unearthly 3:05
I peer into the garden
Which first seems blurred by dust
My focus starts to harden
On lunar wanderlust
That half-daylight which only
Appears to those inside
Who feel a sort of lonely
Alongside part-joyride
That privilege of private
Communion with the sky
Tomorrow I'll revive it
When I wish moon goodbye
I'll likely wake up solo
Once more to window walk
And open wide the airflow
Again 'round three o'clock
Wild breezes make the elms squeak
Their branches rubbing soft
The moon is gone by midweek
Just stars will seem aloft
Night theatre feels like Shakespeare
Where all the world's a stage
A lifetime in a light year
From birth to silver age
Soliloquy or chorus
A joust, a tryst, a rhyme
One word or whole thesaurus
Banal or near-sublime
My window holds off sunrise
Day's real light waits as yet
The trees and creatures likewise
Play seasons' sweet quartet

Haliburton Women's Insitute a 'game changer' for our community

KATE BUTLER
Special to County Life

The above picture depicts stone gates that used to lead into Haliburton's fairgrounds beside town hall. It's said the Women's Institute sponsored the construction of the gates in the 1920s. / Submitted

Recently, I've been diving into some minute books at the Haliburton Highlands Museum that provide a fascinating glimpse into the lives of local women. The term Women's Institute might be familiar to you and indeed, there are many branches in operation in several different countries today.

Building on the British concept of Women's Guilds, the first Women's Institute was established in Stoney Creek, Ont. in 1897. The organization quickly gained local chapters and in 1907, the Haliburton Women's Institute held its first meeting. It's hard for us to imagine what a game changer an organization like this would have been in town. In the early 20th century, many local community organizations were "fraternal", meaning open to men only. That's not to say that women weren't making an impact of the community, through local churches, as practical nurses and midwives and even in business, but the Women's Institute provided a collective voice for women in the community, through its projects and programs.

The group began with 14 charter members, but by 1911, meetings were drawing groups of over 40. In those early years, some of the Institute's projects related to the cultural life of the community with the purchase of a new curtain for the Town Hall's stage at a cost of $28 and a piano, which the group purchased for $75 and then made available for rental by charity groups for 25 cents. In 1922, the Institute decided to embrace the changing times and purchased a 'moving picture machine' for $235. Just imagine the excitement that must have caused in town at the time!

Other contributions of the members of the Institute helped those in need both locally and further afield. They sewed to help fire victims in Northern Ontario, sent barrels of preserved fruit to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto and donated towards buying a cow for a local family. Courses were held to help local women learn skills that were seen as valuable then, and which have stood the test of time, such as cooking, first aid and even teaching. Sometimes the accounts from within the Institute's minutes link with other news from the community. In the 1920s, the Royal Koo-shog Hotel, which was located on the shores of Head Lake, burned down, but the women of the Institute were able to acquire 346 pieces of table silver, which had somehow survived the fire and these were made available for the use of the community.

By the 1930's, eyes were turned even further afield, and the W.I. welcomed a young woman who had attended the 1937 coronation of George VI as a speaker for one of their meetings. Within a couple of years after that, the Institute's attention was dominated by war work, donating money to the British War Victims Fund, and even raising funds to supply cigarettes to those serving overseas. As the war drew to a close, membership in the Institute was dwindling, due to the changing times. In 1946, unable to fill its slate of officers, the local branch voted to disband. For nearly 40 years, the local W.I. contributed where its members saw a need and doubtless, the impact of their projects was felt long after the group disbanded. This photo shows in the distance, the stone gates that used to lead into the village's fairgrounds next to the Town Hall. It's said that the Women's Institute sponsored the construction of the gates in the 1920s and those gates were a local fixture well into the 1960s.

Curious to find out more about our local Women's Institute and its members? October is Women's History Month, so keep your eyes open for more information in the weeks to come!

Gardening in Haliburton Highlands is often about the soil

CAROLYN LANGDON

Special to County Life

If you're new to the Haliburton Highlands and want to replicate the garden you enjoyed in balmy southern Ontario you're in for a surprise.

You are up against:

- Long, cold winters with drying winds
- Variable summers of hot dry or cool wet weather
- Short growing season and cool nights
- Blackflies and mosquitoes
- Nutrient poor and thin soils
- No municipal water or limited well water
- Pests like deer, bear, beaver, and turtles

Fewer sources of information for northern gardeners

The impulse to garden, to create beauty, to grow one's own food is too strong to deter even the most tentative gardener. It's why we accept a certain amount of failure every year, chalking it up to the weather or poor light conditions; then setting out to do better by trying a plant in a different location or adding a new amendment to the soil.

There are benefits of gardening in the Highlands. There are the spectacular views and the ready-made stunning natural backdrop to one's garden. You're certain to have an upper story of native trees and an understory of native shrubs and herbaceous plants. Maybe the contrast of a glittering lake, a burbling creek or an imposing rocky outcrop.

The Highlands are part of the Algonquin dome with the contour of the land sloping from a high point downwards to the east, west and south. The northern part of the county, often called the Algonquin Park Region is marginally cooler, dominated by coniferous forests, and poorer soils. The central and southern parts of the county called the Haliburton Slopes benefit from areas of underlying sedimentary limestone. Limestone contains calcium which can neutralize acid and benefit plants. If you happen to garden in one of these areas you have a bit of an edge. In general however Haliburton soils are acidic with a ph of 6 or less and that's because the subsoil is composed of ground-up granitic rock of the Precambrian shield.

If you don't want to be constantly testing and amending your soil avoid the fussy alkaline loving plants and stick with the native plants and the more tolerant vegetable varieties. Fruit trees like the deeper and richer loam soils of southern Ontario but if you have sufficient soil you may meet with some success.

Soil

The ideal soil, called loam is 1/3rd each of sand, silt and clay with a small amount of organic matter.

You can purchase soil and triple mix in bags or by the truckload but you really don't know what you're getting. Landscaping soils often contain little real soil and burn up after a few short years. Better to start with what you've got and create a soil that has the tilth, texture and nutrients for what you want to grow. The thin but rich humus layer that you find in the forest will have been lost when your property was cleared and buildings constructed. Like most, you will likely find very coarse sandy soil with some silt.

Clay

You'll want to add some clay to your sandy soil. You can shop around to find out who has clay based top soil (not triple mix) for sale. (Why buy sand and wood chips when you already have plenty.) You need clay to retain the good soil microbes and to prevent plant loving nutrients leaching from your sandy soil. The added benefit of clays' retention properties is that fewer soluble nutrients find their way into our waterways, reducing algal blooms and pollution of our wetlands. A second way to introduce clay into your existing soil is to use Calcium Bentonite or Kaolin powdered clays. Available for purchase in Ontario, powdered clays can be carefully spread and worked into your sandy soil.

Organic Matter

Most plants thrive in soil that is rich in organic matter, which retains moisture and has an abundance of bacterial and fungal activity. Nutrient uptake by plants is dependent on a soil rich in bacterial life Organic matter can be locally sourced and can include composted kitchen and yard waste, leaves and needles, well-rotted wood chips, and manure. Organic matter is acidic and there is such a thing as too much of a good thing. Excess nitrogen can burn your plants and affect its flavour and nutritional value. If you pay attention to your soil you will have no need for pesticides, herbicides and fertilizers.

Terroir is the notion that plants grown in a particular soil and climate have a distinctive flavour.

Mulch

With established perennial gardens, mulch is the best way to introduce organic matter. Mulch also holds in moisture which is essential with for a sandy, fast draining soil. A thick layer of mulch (5-10 cm) will also suppress weeds. You can use shredded leaves and pine needles, compost or untreated wood chips. Avoid decoratively coloured bagged mulches unless you know they contain no toxins.

Calcium

To increase the calcium carbonate in your soil use bone meal, limestone or stone dust containing limestone.

This is the recipe for good soil. Autumn is a good time to start a new garden or renew an underperforming garden and apply this information about soil. In upcoming columns we'll touch on other factors like light conditions and weather that affect gardening in the Highlands.

Culture and Sculpture: Addressing the gender gap in public art

YOUKIE STAGG
Special to County Life

Haliburton Sculpture Forest

For art lovers in the Haliburton Highlands there is no shortage of art and public art galleries. The large amount of outdoor art in the County makes art accessible for all ages and people with all types of accessibility needs. Art displayed outdoors is free from the typical restrictions of galleries and has kept art accessible throughout the pandemic. However, when it comes to art that can be displayed outdoors in Ontario and the rest of Canada, there are a limited number of media that are chosen for their durability and resistance to the elements. These are artforms including carving in stone, working in bronze, steel fabrication, and blacksmithing, that remain to male-dominated. This has created a world of art that is available for everyone but does not reflect everyone who sees it. Women are drastically underrepresented in the public art world of Ontario, a quick look at the public art of Toronto, Collingwood, and Dysart et al websites show the work of very few women in comparison to the number of works by men.

Jennifer Anne Kelly, a glass sculpture artist from Ottawa has worked to create space for underrepresented groups in art for years. "I am passionate about accessibility in art, both from the viewer's perspective and the artist's perspective," said Kelly. "Public art is so important because it is the one opportunity for everyone to be able to experience art but if that art that is being displayed is from a very small pool of people that maybe don't represent the greater community, then is that the right art to be offering for everyone to see?" Jennifer has shown her kiln glass work around the world and has several public art displays including her piece Take Flight in the Downtown Haliburton Sculpture Exhibition running until Oct. 28. She has an upcoming show titled handmade with the City of Ottawa, and an open studio show in collaboration with Loretta Studios and Loam Clay studio, dates to be determined depending on pandemic restrictions.

Public art application processes are inaccessible for many artists, as the application and installation processes often require the artists to collaborate with structural engineers, landscapers, and even architects for large pieces. Some calls to artists for public artwork focus less on the artist's vision and more on the structure of the piece, creating pieces that serve a purpose within a space rather than reflect an artist's work. Many public art pieces in larger cities require artists (or teams of artists) with prestigious CV's, making public art applications difficult for artists without many years of experience.

For outdoor installations there are often material and minimum size requirements for the pieces which plays into the gender gap as well. Some artforms are predominantly dominated by women while others are the opposite. The textile industry including tapestry, fashion design, etc. is largely made up of women in both the percentage of sale earnings and numbers of artists themselves, while more "traditional" forms of art including painting and sculpture (such as bronze, welding, and blacksmith) are dominated by men. Some have also noted that when it comes to sculpture, men in general tend to create larger-scale pieces than women in similar fields, which some believe lead to outdoor installations.

The outdoor public art world is not the only area of the arts where a gender gap can be seen. The majority of artists and gallery curators in the top galleries in the US and Canada are men, while mid-level galleries tend to be home to mostly women in both artist and curatorial roles. However, in recent years there has been a shift in the representation of women in the arts. The majority of fine arts degrees, both bachelor’s and master’s degrees, are held by women and women in leading roles in galleries has been increasing.

“My observation is that there are more women in all aspects of the art organizations now. It wasn’t always thus, but the past few years have seen a lot of change, and there are a lot of women doing public art as well,” said multimedia artist, Mary Anne Barkhouse. “I know of several who are cross-disciplinary between architecture/fine art, so the times are changing. And many of the people at the foundry I work with are women,”

Barkhouse has numerous outdoor sculptures across the country and has gained international recognition for her work. Through her experience as an artist and her work in the Royal Canadian Academy of the Arts she has noticed progress in the representation of women. Mary Anne’s bronze sculpture Gelert is part of the permanent collection at the Haliburton Sculpture Forest.Her exhibit titled Opimihaw at the Wanuskewin Heritage Park in Saskatoon showcases the themes of reconciliation, restoration, healing, and the integrity and strength in human and natural ‘ecosystems’. It is on display until October 2021.

Opimihaw installation in Barkhouse's Opimihaw exhibition, consisting of a long table made of maple, basswood and glass. A variety of ceramic plates on top featuring images of many species from within the bison dominated ecosystem, and a bronze coyote and badger at the end. Three tapestries: "Et in arcadia ego" (Even in Paradise, I am here), "acta sanctorum" (the deeds of the saints), "les vieilles connaissances" (the old acquaintances) are seen in the background. Image courtesy of Wanuskewin Galleries, photo: Carey Shaw.

Take Flight by Jennifer Anne Kelly, made of kiln-fired glass and laser-cut stainless steel. The piece “is a statement of optimism and a reminder of the joys that surround us.” On sale as part of the Downtown Haliburton Sculpture Exhibition, it can be found beside The Wind and the Willows Spa on Highland Street until Oct. 28.

Here in Haliburton, the Haliburton Sculpture Forest is committed to increasing the diversity of the artists it hosts. They hope to increase the number of BIPOC artists in their permanent collection and increase the number of female artists as well. Four of the last ten sculptures installed were created by women. The board of directors (made up of mostly women) is also working towards making the Sculpture Forest more accessible to create an art experience for everyone. Calls to artists at the Sculpture Forest focus on the work of art first and the installation and maintenance challenges second, creating a curated selection of work that is diverse and unlike most public art collections.

The Haliburton Sculpture Forest has a collection of over 40 sculptures by Canadian and International artists nestled along forest trails and surrounding the campus of the Haliburton School of Art + Design. It is located in Glebe Park at the edge of the village of Haliburton. It is open 365 days a year. Admission is free, but donations are greatly appreciated. For more information visit haliburtonsculptureforest.ca. Free tours are offered every Tuesday morning at 10:00 in July and August and private small group tours are available year-round through yoursoutdoors.ca.

New schoolhouse pop-up pottery events happening in September

APRIL GATES
Special to County Life

Blackbird Pottery presents Schoolhouse/6 Fine Craft and Vintage Pop-Up Market, Friday, Sept. 3 and Saturday, Sept. 4, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., at 5843 Gelert Road.

Located on the grounds of the historic Donald Schoolhouse, this mini outdoor market features a curated selection of makers and shakers from the Haliburton Highlands and beyond.

The September Pop-Up welcomes a broad spectrum of mediums.

Printmaking and functional fabric art by Darby Bayly, Pyrography meets wood by Keri-Lyn Freebird of Burnt Timber Art, Traditional Preserves by Collin Burke of Lost Arts Academy, Collectable Vinyl from Dan Manley of Russell Red Records, Contemporary Landscape paintings by Rod Prouse, Wood fired Pottery by Lisa Barry of Homestead Pottery, Fine Jewelry by Naomi Assenheim of Opal Wing Creations, Gorgeous textiles for house and home by Jen Manuell of Fisheye Sisters, quality everyday wear by Kelli Schmidt of The Haliburton Clothing Company, Vintage and collectables from Highland Huntress & Blackbird Pottery by April Gates plus, Gourmet vegan cuisine from Alexis Macnab and Matthew Thompson of Nourished. Please note, Nourished will be onsite Friday only and encourages you to bring your own bowl and cutlery to help reduce waste.

Schoolhouse Pop-Up Markets started in the summer of 2020, in part as a response to the sudden loss of 'business as normal' due to the pandemic, though taking a leap with curated pop-ups, is more so the realization of a long held dream to breathe and weave new life into a property where historically, community has gathered. When the Schoolhouse was decommissioned, it later served as a church, then a community center before being converted into a home.

This summer marks Blackbird Pottery's 6th anniversary at the Donald Schoolhouse. Throughout the past several years, expanding into this 'new' old space, has included building a clay community through clay classes and open studio time for the clay curious and artists alike. Though classes are currently suspended, Blackbird Pottery hopes to return to experiential offerings in 2022 alongside building on the success of Schoolhouse Pop-Ups.

"One benefit of having to shift due to the pandemic is being less busy with external commitments, just enough to consider the history and potential of this property in a meaningful way. Small artisan markets and 'pop-ups' are nothing new. In a world where events were getting bigger and bigger, this return to a more intimate experience, is a return to grass roots for makers," says event organizer and host, April Gates.

"Schoolhouse Pop-Ups are the perfect balance of remembrance of things past, and a hopeful embrace of moving forward. A truly enjoyable two day experience for both maker and patron," said Collin Burke of the Lost Arts Academy. Burke partcipated in Schoolhouse Pop-Ups inaugural events last summer with Vintage wares and his traditional preserves from recipes collected over generations of hand scratched notes passed down.

Schoolhouse Pop-Up is an outdoor event and follows recommended Covid safety protocols. We practice physical distancing, masking where required and provide hand sanitizer.

Schoolhouse Pop-Up runs from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, Sept. 3 and Saturday, Sept. 4 only.

In the event of unstable weather please check ahead, follow Blackbird Pottery on Facebook and Instagram for the latest updates, or visit blackbirdpottery.ca for more information.

Seniors blank Falcons

Redmen win opener

by Jerry Grozelle

In spite of a lack of pre-season play, the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School Redmen senior football players showed their team colours when they played host to the Fenelon Falls Falcons. Friday's game in Haliburton saw the Redmen get off to a slow start, building momentum as the game progressed. When it was over the Redmen had a 26-0 win for their efforts.

"We were a little rusty off the start," said Haliburton head coach Tim Davies. "That was indicative of the fact that we didn't have any exhibition games."

The Redmen were in game form by the second quarter, marching the ball all the way up field against the wind. By the half, the Redmen were in front by a 13-0 score.

"Our offensive line did a great job for us," Davies said.

Ryan Anderson scored two touchdowns, one of which was a 91-yard run on a sweep play. Shane Parks and Matt Reid added one TD each.

George Godfrey threw two of the touchdown passes. He also accounted for two conversions.

Fenelon had a good march in the fourth quarter, advancing to the Haliburton 12 yard line.

"They had three cracks from the 12 yard line, but our defence made a good goal line stand," Davies said.

Nate Koz was a stand-out in the Haliburton defensive line, the coach said.

Anderson led Hal High's rushing, with 230 yards. Ashley Walker picked up 70 yards, Darren Gilbert had 50, while Devon Dart and Greg Simmons had 40 each.

Quarterback George Godfrey completed seven of 12 passes for 110 yards.

Davies called Fenelon's offense "boring." He added that the Falcons' lack of variety in their plays resulted in "kind of a non-game for many of our defensive players.

On the negative side, Davies said the late start had an effect on the team. "We had a lot of penalties," he noted.

The next game for the Redmen will be Thursday, September 25 at I.E. Weldon in Lindsay.

TOUCHDOWN: Ryan Anderson catches a pass from Redmen quarterback George Godfrey just outside the Fenelon Falls Falcons' goal line. Anderson scored one of his two touchdowns in the game on this play. Haliburton's senior Redmen romped to a 26-0 win over the Falcons in the first game of the 1997 Kawartha High School Football League season.

Preliminary Strategic Plan unveiled

by Jerry Grozelle

A community-based strategic plan for Haliburton County is being developed. With input from two public meetings and information gleaned from a number of existing reports, the Strategic Planning Committee, which includes Jeanne Anthon, Jock Mavor and Doug Holman, in co-operation with Christopher Bryant of Econotrends Ltd., has developed a "vision statement" for the county to strive toward over the next five to 10 years.

The vision statement goal is: A county with a co-operative environment within which the different players and population groups have worked together to achieve: a sustainable natural environment; a more stable, diversified and year-round economy, based on clean small to medium sized economic activities; residential development, both seasonal and permanent, in keeping with maintaining a small town atmosphere, environmental integrity and adequate accessible services; and a strong sense of regional identity with a more inclusive and tolerant community with all it takes to provide a high quality of life for families and individuals.

The intent of the plan is to identify and build on the strengths and assets of Haliburton County. Short, medium and long term goals will be set to capitalize on the county's human resources, business potential and natural resources, while maintaining the atmosphere and

Business park comes under close scrutiny

Changes to the municipal official plan and zoning by-law will be considered at the September 25 meeting of Anson, Hindon and Minden council. The changes deal with the establishment of the municipally owned business park at the corner of Highway 35 and Prince Street and regulation regarding backlot development.

A public meeting to hear concerns regarding the changes was held September 17 at the municipal office. About 20 taxpayers were on hand to ask questions of the municipality's planner, Bob Lehman, and members of council.

Reeve Jeanne Anthon said one of the priorities of the current council had been to establish a place for business to locate within the municipality. She also noted that planning meetings being hosted by the county had strongly supported the idea of greater diversity of economic opportunities in the Highlands are aimed at creating economic opportunities in this municipality," the reeve said. "In particular we want opportunities which would keep our youth here."

Speaking on the business park, Lehman said it had been the intention of the municipality to establish a business park since 1983, when the township's official plan was first drafted. The changes being considered to the zoning bylaw would recognize the new status of the business park and create a special zoning for the area.

The planner pointed out that while the municipality is hoping to attract manufacturing businesses to the park, restrictions would ensure that any fabrication would not take place outside the buildings. He said, through the use of detailed site plan requirements, such things as outdoor storage of material would be restricted and setbacks would have to maincommunity's water and sewer system.

He told the gathering that the municipality looked at a number of potential business park locations, most adjacent to Highway 35 and felt this was the most suitable for development at this time. Lehman pointed out the property has easy access to the highway, visibility, and is close to the community.

The land was purchased earlier this year and work began on preparing the street which will cut through the property. So far, the meeting was told, the municipality has spent $39,000 on site preparation with additional costs expected in the near future.

Opening the meeting to questions, a number of issues were raised about the business park, including the impact on the environment which may be caused by any manufacturing concern that may locate there. "Should we be introducing restrictions on what by-
